DIES-GENERALS-CONTINUED.

Leading Military Men on Our Side.

One of the saddest things connected with the war was the large number of our ablest and best generals who were killed in battle or died from the effects of wounds. The days of the heroes of classic times or the chivalry of modern Europe never produced braver knights, more self-sacriing patriots, than that galaxy of soldiers which adorn the pages of Confederate his-

And then, as a rule, we fought against "overwhelming numbers and resources," and it seemed especially necessary that our generals should lead their men into the very thickest of the fight. Besides, there was a sentiment among our ragged, barefooted heroes of the rank and file that their leaders should be at the front, and woe betide the general of whom they could say, "He loves to send us to the front but he keeps well in the rear himsolf," or the officers about whom they could pass the grim joke; "There were not trees enough there for the officers to hide behind, and we privates had to take it without cover."

GENERALS AT THE FOREPRONT.

GENERALS AT THE POREPRONT.

It was no uncommon thing, therefore, to find our highest generals in the very fore-front of the battle.

At First Manassas Generals Beauregard and Johnston, at the crisis of the battle, both led their men, battle-flag in hand. Albert Sidney Johnston, whom President Davis always regarded as the ablest soldier of the war, fell leading a victorious charge at Shilob, and in the execution of that brilliant strategy which had so far succeeded, and which had he been spared an hour longer, would have resulted in the capture or annihilation of Grant's whole army.

capture or annihilation of Grant's whole army.

Stonewall Jackson was often seen on the advance skirmish line of the army, was ever found in the very thickest of the fight, and when shot down by his ewn men (who would have died rather than injure a button on his old gray coat) was returning from a bold reconneissance beyond his advanced pickets. "Jeb" Stuart fell when leading a heroic charge against immense odds, which prevented Sheridan from riding into Richmond that day and crowned a brilliant carcer with a glorious death.

A. P. Hill, the chivalric hero of many a glorious field, fell on that last sad day at Petersburg (when he had risen from a sick hed to command his corps of heroes) in a brave attemnt to join that part of his corps which had been cut off from the main army.

Glorious old Pat Cleburne fell at Franklin leading one of the most superb charges that the world ever saw.

But we must restrain our pen, for columns would not suffice even to mention the names of the Confederate generals who were noted for conspienous gallantry and an even reckless exposure of their lives.
But we must not fail to say that our grand old chief, R. E. Lee, was "the bravest of the brave," and that the world's history affords no grander battle pictures than Lee at the Wilderness offering to lead
Hood's Texas brigade and at Spotsylvenia Courtinouse offering to lead Gordon's division, and afterwards Harris's Mississippi brigade, when, upon all three occasions,
the ragged heroes shouted, "General Lee to the rear! General Lee to the rear! We will drive them back if General Lee will go to the rear!"

Indeed the pleasant incident which Presi-

general and a number of officers of lower grade.

The lines were swept for a distance of four or five hundred yards to the right and left, and two efforts made to recover the captured works were handsomely repulsed. But it was found that the enclosed works in rear, commanding the enemy's main line, could only be taken at a great sacrifice, and our troops were withdrawn to their original position.

It being impracticable to bring off the captured guns owing to the nature of the ground, they were disabled and left. Our loss reported is not heavy. Among the woundedare Brigadier-General Terry, fleshwound, and Brigadier-General Phil. Cooke, in the arm.

Jones, commanding the artillery on that portion of the lines, was at the front superintending in person the operations of the artillery, and that a select body of officers and men. under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Stribling, charged the enemy's breastworks with the sharpshooters of one corps and immediately turned upon the enemy the captured guns.

There is only one other report from General Lee later than these, and that about a comparatively unimportant attempt of the enemy on some portion of the skirmish line.

A CONTEMPORAREOUS ACCOUNT.

[Extract from New York Herald.]

On gaining possession of Fort Steadman the enemy extended a line of battle from the fort along the hill over the line of breastworks and behind the latter.

At the same time the guns of Fort Steadman were turned upon Battery No. 10, and with effect, for our men were hastily driven out.

Lee.
All hall! O lovely morn,
On this auspicious day
Around this sacred spot we meet,
And consecrate to thee, O Lee!
This hallowed ground,
On which thy knightly form
Shall to mankind recail
Thy virtues so oft told;
While time as it rolls on
Shall still add force and power.
To teach the right where truth asserts
The mighty empire of its sway.

WISCONSIN CATHOLICS. They Make a Declaration of Principles-Church Schools.

(By telegraph to the Dispatch.)

(By telegraph to the Dispatch.)

MILWAUEEE, May 30.—At a late hour last night the following declaration of principles was adopted by a mass-meeting of Catholics in this city: We, the members of the first State Convention of German Catholics in Wisconsin, consider it our highest and most sacred duty to assure the father of all Catholic Christendom, his Holiness, Pope Leo XIII., of our unconditional submission to his fatherly and loving care, and together with this our humble submission, we express here our most ardent wish that so just and reasonable a demand of the Holy Father and of all Christendom as the patrimony of St. Peter or an annexed papal state may, in accordance with the all-wise guidance of God, be returned during the lifetime of his Holiness or to his religious heirs.

The declaration then acknowledges the dual duty of Catholics in defence of the Church and citizens; points to the sacrifices made by Catholics in defence of the integrity of the Union, and continues:

"And in order to make the nation capable of such sacrifices the civil government must not only abstain from attacking personal and hereditary rights, but must protect them by wise and just laws. Therefore, we demand that religious hierty and liberty of conscience, the most holy rights.

Church and citizens; points to the sacrifices made by Catholics in defence of the integrity of the Union, and continues:

"And in order to make the nation capable of such sacrifices the civil government must not only abstain from attacking personal and hereditary rights, but must protect them by wise and just laws. Therefore, we demand that religious liberty and liberty of conscience, the most holy rights of all citizens, shall remain, as granted, unaltered and unabridged.

Furthermore, as we consider the maintenance of the above rights absolutely dependent upon the education of our children in our own schools, we demand this privilege and shall, independent of all other party political interests, iou, at the polls those citizens who are of the same opinion concerning church schools, so that in the struggle with our oppressors we may be more sure of victory and maintain our people's Christian principles. We, therefore, fully endorse the resolutions adopted by the convention of Catholic benovelent societies of the State in reference to the Bennett law.

[Special tolegram to the Dispatch.]

ALEXANDRIA, May 28.—Alexandris has a special connection with the unveiling cersmonies of the monument of General R. E. Lee at Richmond to morrow, and will send her best citizens to participate.

It is Alexandria which unites Washington and Lee. Their mural monuments stand together in Christ church, and the most trying period in the life of both of them occurred on the green which surrounds the church. In the centennial address delivered here in 1880it was said that after the tea had been thrown overboard in Boston harbor "the gale which swept from the north brought the clash of resounding arms." Amid the tumult of anxiety a calm Sabbath dawned on Alexandria. The hot July sky was fair overhead, and the grass was green in Christchurch yard.

He was known to be an ardent patriot, but it was known, too, that he was opposed to the redection of Colonel Broadwater, who was in favor of resistance, and he was inclined to support his friend Bryan Fairfax, who counselled submission. He loitered awhile and talked as he loitered to a party of gentlemen upon the green. He was chairman of the committee appointed at the last June court to draft a platform on which Fairfax and Alexandria should stand. "What does he say?" asks a bystander. "He is for resistance; that means fight"; and then there on Christ-church green a nation was con-

HIS MARRIAGE.

Here he made the acquintance of Miss Mary Custis, whom he afterwards married. The marriage notice as published ten days after the wedding, which occurred June 30, 1831, is as follows:

"Married, at Arlington House, by the Rev. Dr. Keith, Lieutenant Robert Lee, of the United States Corps of Engineers, to Miss Mary A. R. Custis, only daughter of G. W. F. Custis, Eag."

This is all the notice of the wedding.
The stately modesty of the newly-married couple was spared the modern newspaper notice of what the bride had on at her wedding and what she bad packed in her trunks. Her presents and trousseum are in happy oblivion.
